The third-person effect hypothesis predicts that people tend to perceive that mass media messages have a greater effect on others than on themselves, based on personal biases. The third-person effect manifests itself through an individual's overestimation of the effect of a mass communicated message on the generalized other, or an underestimation of the effect of a mass communicated message on ...

The hypothesis of linguistic relativity holds that the structure of a language affects its speakers' world view or cognition. Also known as the Sapir-Whorf hypothesis, or Whorfianism, the principle is often defined to include two versions: the strong hypothesis and the weak hypothesis: . The strong version says that language determines thought and that linguistic categories limit and ...

Since the advent of the Women's Movement, women have made enormous strides toward equal opportunity in the workplace. At present, women now make up 46% of the U.S. workforce, and 36% of managers are female (US Bureau of Labor Statistics, 2006). Egalitarian norms and economic pressures (e.g., the need for families to have dual incomes) have radically altered attitudes toward working women ...
