

elements of polymer degradation pdf

The microstructure of a polymer (sometimes called configuration) relates to the physical arrangement of monomer residues along the backbone of the chain. These are the elements of polymer structure that require the breaking of a covalent bond in order to change.

PSI Uniflo Mixers allow continuous mixing and blending for a variety of materials by dividing the melt stream continually. The principle of operation is a helical mixing element, containing alternating elements or fins, which provide complete radial and axial blending for any combination of liquids, powders, and polymers with minimal pressure drop.

During the resorbable-polymer-boom of the 1970s and 1980s, polycaprolactone (PCL) was used extensively in the biomaterials field and a number of drug-delivery devices.

A high-refractive-index polymer (HRIP) is a polymer that has a refractive index greater than 1.50. Such materials are required for anti-reflective coating and photonic devices such as light emitting diodes (LEDs) and image sensors. The refractive index of a polymer is based on several factors which include polarizability, chain flexibility, molecular geometry and the polymer backbone orientation.

A fast, nondestructive, camera-based method to capture optical bandgap images of perovskite solar cells with micrometer-scale spatial resolution is developed. This technique allows for the probing of relative variations in optical bandgaps across various solar cells, and for the resolution of bandgap inhomogeneity within the same device due to material degradation and impurities.

Advanced Energy Materials: Early View

High-quality TPO starts with good chemistry. Good chemistry is essential to engineering the right polymer. This is a critical consideration because the polymer
